ADDRESS OF WELCOME

Parents, Members of the Faculty, Classmates, and Friends:

As president of the Senior Class of 1965, it is my privilege on behalf of the class to extend to you a most hearty welcome to our Class Day exercises.

As our four years at Millbury Memorial High School draw to a close, we are suddenly confronted with the realization that our opportunities to be together as a class are numbered. We are, consequently, more deeply aware of the responsibilities that lie ahead. As our motto indicates, "We Have Finished, Only to Begin." Let us hope that we are prepared to make our school, our family, and our friends proud of us.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank our parents for their love and guidance during the past four years. I would also like to thank Mr. Shaw and the faculty for helping to prepare us for the future.

We sincerely hope that all of you will enjoy these Class Day exercises.

JOSEPH MARTINELLI

CLASS SONG

Now we must leave the halls of Millbury High.
Our minds are filled with thoughts of years gone by.
There has been laughter, heartaches and some tears.
Onward we'll venture thru the coming years.

We face the world with courage in our heart.
This is the moment we are to depart.
Life now awaits us, faith and hope within.
Now "We Have Finished, Only to Begin."

CLASS HISTORY

My journal lay beside me, and I picked it up and began leafing through its pages, hoping to awaken a few tender memories of yesterday. Vividly, it all began to unfold before me—our four studious and fun-filled years at M.M.H.S. I turned to my first entry and began reading. From then on, I relived each and every joyous, sad, and bittersweet experience of four glorious high school years.

September 9, 1961—On this eventful day we stepped out of a seemingly carefree world—into a world of diligent study and more responsibility. Soon the novelty of being in high school wore off, and we began to settle down into the daily routine. Our first duty as members of the freshman class was to elect our officers. Those elected were Michael McArdle, president; Larry Salem, vice-president; Mary Ann Roach, secretary; Brain Lucas, treasurer; and Robert Molt class captain. Soon after, Susan Wishneski and Therinda Lindstrom were elected to represent our class on the Student Council, along with our president Michael McArdle.

The more adventuresome of the class joined the many organizations open to them such as: the Dramatic Club, the Debating Club, and the Glee Club. Those musically inclined members who joined the band were Richard McSheehy, Robert Rhodes. James Matthews, and John Sulham. Freshman members of the Reflector Staff were Meredith Dana, Linda Johnson, and Carl Ernitz.

Another accomplishment of the class was the appearance of two freshmen, Therinda Lindstrom and David Lavich, in the annual play entitled "Quit Your Kidding."

Then along came football season. Among those claimed by this sport from the freshman class were Gregory Lange, Kenneth Holm, Clifford Taft, Samuel Longbook, Robert Rhodes, Bruce Lemoine, Martin Roach, Robert Lapinsky, Richard Langway, Raymond Anderson, Ronald Roberts, Larry Salem, David Luikey, Edward Opacki, Brain Lucas, Dale Anderson, Michael McArdle, and Robert Molt. Our vivacious freshman cheerleaders spurred the boys on to many a victory.

Those attracted by the girls' field hockey team were Terry Burke, Jane Friberg, Linda Magill, Elizabeth Markunas, Candice Sharron, Susan Wishneski, and Kathleen Mahan.

Soon came the basketball season, and those on the boys' team were Brian Lucas, Michael McArdle, Daniel Jezyk, Martin Roach, Larry Salem, Edward Santon, and Robert Molt. The girls' team sported Terry Burke, Joyce Childs, Jane Friberg, Karen Krula, Linda Lawson, Linda Magill, Candice Sharron, Kathleen Mahan, and Patricia Nowlan.

After the drudgery and the last minute cramming for mid-years, we were again summoned to the field of sports—baseball, softball, and track. Each of these teams was heartily supported by members of our class.

At last came summer vacation, and we all dispersed in our various directions, trying to forget the fact that we still had a long road to travel before we graduated.

As soon as we returned to M.M.H.S. in the Fall of 1962 for our sophomore year, we again elected class officers. Those elected were Brian Lucas, president; Therinda Lindstrom, vice-president; Michael McArdle, treasurer, Mary Ann Roach, secretary; and Martin Roach, class captain. Our former members returned to the Student Council, and Brian Lucas was our only new member.

Once again, many flocked to the Biology Club, French Club, Debating club, Dramatic Club, and Band. The Glee Club also received our support as it attracted twelve sophomores. Among those on the Reflector Staff were Larry Salem, Carl Ernitz, David Tebo, Lorraine LaBarre, Rita Raad, Mary Ann Roach, Catherine Mason, Eugenia Spiridavicius, Patricia Kolofsky, Carolyn Ball, Therinda Lindstrom, Annamae DeLuca, and Shirley Ducharme.

David Lavich appeared in the cast of this year's play, "Mr. Co-ed," a great comical hit.

Soon everyone felt the call of fall sports, and among those on the football squad were seventeen of our class-members. Eleven girls from our class boosted the girls' field hockey team into great shape.

This year our cheerleaders were Charlotte Hill, Therinda Lindstrom, and Mary Ann Roach.

The girls' and boys' basketball teams continued to appeal to many in our class.

This year we hit mid-year exams a little more bravely because of our previous expeience with them. Still, we were very much relieved to have them over.

Finally, spring arrived, and Craig Conroy, Brian Lucas, Michael

McArdle, Joseph Miller, Martin Roach and Larry Salem made the baseball team. Our contributions to the softball team were Joyce Childs, Karen Krula, Arlene Parella, Candice Sharron, Karen Sheehan, Patricia Nowland, and Rita Raad. The track team featured Bruce Couture, Robert Grenier, Joseph Langone, Robert Buffone, Mark O'Gassian, Daniel Jezyk, and Robert Rhodes.

Sooner than we realized, summer was upon us and we left school for what we felt was a well-deserved vacation.

In September of 1963 we returned to school as upperclassmen, and soon we were proudly displaying our brand new class rings, our badges of distinction. These had been chosen by a ring committee composed of Michael McArdle, Linda Magill, Annamae DeLuca, Helen Gwozdowski, and Edward O'Toole.

Again we elected class officers, and they were Michael McArdle, president; Joseph Martinelli, vice-president; Susan Wishneski, treasurer; Sheila May, secretary; and Martin Roach, class captain. This year's members of the Student Council were Michael McArdle, Therinda Lindstrom, Catherine Mason and Linda Stowe.

Again our class did its share in supporting the school's various clubs and organizations. Among the juniors making up the office staff were Carol Piasta, Catherine Mason, Linda Stowe, Sheila May, Jane Friberg and Lorraine LaBarre. The following juniors joined the library staff: Diane LeBlanc, Linda Holmes, Roberta Keyes, Carol Piasta, Constance DiPilato, and Elaine James.

Interest in sports was again high, and fourteen members of our class made the football team.

Those who answered the call to boys' basketball were Joseph Langone, Brian Lucas, Michael McArdle, Daniel Jezyk, and Martin Roach. We were very proud of our boys, for they won the Clark Tournament.

On the girls' basketball team were Terry Burke, Karen Krula, Arlene Landry, Linda Magill, Arlene Parella, Candice Sharron, and Patricia Nowlan.

At last, spring rolled around and Brian Lucas, Michael McArdle, Martin Roach, and Larry Salem joined the baseball team.

Joyce Childs, Karen Krula, Arlene Parella, Candice Sharron, Patricia Nowlan, and Rita Raad were on the softball team.

This year four of our classmates—David Lavich, Eugenia Spiridavicius, Vito Amorelli, and Linda Stowe—were members of the cast in the annual school production, "No More Homework"

Our class made a grand showing in the Annual Science Fair. Honorable mention awards were given to Karen Sheehan for "The Circulatory System"; Robert Lucas for "Lunar Photography"; and Therinda Lindstrom and Mary Ann Roach for "Cosmetics, Inc."

Now we began looking forward expectantly to our first prom. We elected Brian Lucas, Terry Burke, Craig Conroy, Karen Sheehan, and Michael McArdle to the Ticket and Invitation Committee. The Orchestra Committee was comprised of Martin Roach, Joseph Martinelli, and Daniel Jezyk. Our fine Decorating Committee chose the theme "Sea of Enchantment." Later on, when prom night arrived, June 7, 1964, Roberta Keyes was chosen queen of the prom.

We were very happy to hear that this year Meredith Dana, Janice Savoie, and Michael McArdle had qualified as Horace Mann students by attaining an average of 90% or better for two consecutive years. We extended our congratulations to all three.

The fourth annual induction of the National Honor Society was held on May 15, 1964, and those juniors inducted were Kenneth Holm, Sheila May, Joseph Jurgelonis, Therinda Lindstrom, Martin Roach, Karen Sheehan, Mary Ann Roach, Wallace Stewart, Linda Magill, and Ronald Roberts.

Karen Krula and Richard McSheehy gained distinction when they both received a formal "Letter of Commendation" for their outstanding performance on the National Merit Scholarship Test.

On May 12, 1964, Carolyn Ball was honored by the Worcester Branch of the National League of Pen Women for her outstanding literary achievement in our high school publication, the Reflector.

Thus, our junior year came to a close, and we realized that we had but a short time left to enjoy the wonderful experiences found in the high school years.

When we returned in September, having at last reached our long-awaited rank of superiority as seniors, we realized that we must buckle down to work as well as enjoy all the fun in store for us.

Promptly, we held our elections. We elected Joseph Martinelli, president; Michael McArdle, vice-president; Sheila May, secretary; Martin Roach, treasurer; and Richard Langway, class captain.

Janice Savoie was chosen as our D.A.R. good citizen.

Next on the agenda was the important election of the Aftermath staff. Chosen were Meredith Dana, as editor-in-chief, and Janice Savoie and Sheila May as assistant editors. Appointed as associate editors were Kenneth Holm and Jane Friberg.

The Advertising Committee was composed of Brian Lucas, our business manager, assisted by Karen Sheehan, Terry Burke, Patricia Nowlan, Linda Magill, and Ronald Roberts.

Energetically, we began preparations for our Senior Prom. Linda Magill, Shirley Lemanski, and Larry Salem were on the Orchestra Committee, and those on the Ticket and Invitation Committee were Lorraine LaBarre, Catherine Mason, Paul Chausse, Linda Stowe, and Annamae DeLuca. The Decorating Committee made a tremendous success of the evening due to their long hours of hard work. As a theme for the prom, they had chosen "Snowflake Splendor." Our queen was Linda Stowe, with Arlene Landry, Sandra Cummings, Diane Watts, Candice Sharron, and Charlotte Hill the Senior Class contributions to the court.

Besides the many organizations and clubs open to us, we still had our work with the Reflector. Therinda Lindstrom was chosen as editor-in-chief with Elsa Arnett, art editor; Shirley Lemanski and Linda Magill, business editors; Janice Savoie, feature editor; Kenneth Holm, literary editor; and Linda Lawson, Suzanne Brodeur, and Annamae DeLuca, production editors. Twenty-six members of the Senior Class were on the staff.

Ten of our senior girls were on the field hockey team.

The football team sported Dale Anderson, Raymond Anderson, Robert Buffone, Warren Anderson, Craig Conroy, Daniel Jezyk, Richard Langway, Paul Lavallee, Samuel Longbook, Brian Lucas, Michael McArdle, Robert Rhodes, Robert Lapinsky, Gerald Fortin and Larry Salem. This was a big year for our boys for they won the Blackstone Valley Championship.

The annual play, Our Hearts Were Young and Gay, displayed the talents of several classmates—Vito Amorelli, Linda Stowe, Joseph Martinelli, David Lavich, Carolyn Ball, and Robert Lapinsky. We all appreciated the patient and helpful guidance of Miss Berthiaume, our advisor, during the long hours of rehearsal.

The Science Fair held in March was a great success. First prize went to Robert Lucas and Wallace Stewart for their exhibit, "Audio-Visual Intercommunication." Those seniors who received honorable mention were Harry Collins and Dennis Kotasek.

As Class Day and graduation drew closer, our excitement mounted increasingly. Mr. Shaw announced the Senior Honor Students: Michael McArdle. Sheila May, Meredith Dana, Wallace Stewart, Therinda Lindstrom, Janice Savoie, Karen Krula, Joseph Jurgelonis, Larry Salem, Jane Friberg, Elaine Whiterell, Shirley Lemanski, Kenneth Holm, Lorraine LaBarre, Stephanie Lettic, Linda Magill, Linda Paille, Warren Anderson, Carolyn Ball, Ronald Roberts, Catherine Mason, Elsa Arnett, and Richard McSheehy.

The top four scholars in the class, Michael McArdle, Sheila May, Meredith Dana, and Wallace Stewart, were appointed graduation speakers.

Also, we extended our congratulations to Michael McArdle, the only one of our class to receive the Horace Mann Award twice in succession. Michael maintained a 90% or better scholastic average throughout his four years at M.M.H.S.

One of the last official duties of our class was to elect Class Day speakers. Those chosen were Jane Friberg, Statistics; Janice Savoie, Prophecy; Larry Salem, Omissions and Corrections; Brian Lucas, Last Will and Testament; Martin Roach and Therinda Lindstrom, Class Gifts; and Linda Stowe, Class History. Our class president, Joseph Martinelli, would give the Address of Welcome.

Members of the Motto Committee were Charlotte Hill, Linda Paille, and Patricia Nowlan; of the Class Song Committee, Catherine Mason, Shirley Lemanski, and Elsa Arnett; and of the Tie Committee, Brian Lucas, Craig Conroy, and Ronald Roberts. On the Decorating Committee were Mary Ann Roach, Terry Burke, and Rita Raad; and on the Invitation Committee were Karen Sheehan, Helen Gwozdowski, Sheila May, Lorraine LaBarre, and Linda Paille.

Our class expressed heartfelt sympathy for the loss of one of our most congenial classmates, Frances I. Asselin, who died November 29, 1964.

Graduation Day, June 17, 1965—This is the end of our high school years as recorded in my journal. A chapter of each of our lives comes to a close, and although it is sad to leave such a happy experience behind, with the modification of a poet's words, we might say:

"Though nothing can bring back the hour
Of splendor in our youth, of glory in the flower;
We will grieve not, rather find
Joy in what remains behind."

CLASS PROPHECY

Here I am in New York City and I have just been appointed chief international news correspondent for the Gurglehemersplirt. What! You haven't heard about the Gurglehemersplirt. Gurglehemersplirt readers know what they're talking about. Why, it's just the leading newspaper of the 1990's that's all. I, Janice Savoie, was very glad that I had been appointed their correspondent because it would give me an opportunity to travel around the world and perhaps a chance to see some of my old classmates of the graduating class of 1965.

My first assignment was to report on the Olympic games being held in Mexico. I had one problem—how to get there? Having just had twenty pounds of helium gas pumped into Thelma-Lou, my unicycle, I packed a box lunch and on Saturday, September 9, 1990, I was off.

No sooner had I parked Thelma-Lou down by that old Gulf Stream, when I bumped into the helium gas attendant, Kevin Savageaux, who said "Ma'am, you need a refill." I left my unicycle in his care with the instructions, "Fill 'er up."

The games had already begun. I had just missed an event in candlestick jumping. I was informed that it had been a tie between Michael McArdle, Martin Roach, and Brian Lucas. Things were looking great and so I anxiously awaited the next event which was hopping backward on the left heel while flapping the tongue. Too bad our boys, Ronald Roberts, Richard Langway, and Larry Salem, lost—but after all it's one of the most difficult feats to accomplish. Then came the last event, wiggling the toes and ears simultaneously. My heart was bursting with pride as Paul Lavallee was announced the winner.

Now the women's events began. The high-jumping event was won by Shirley Lemanski, while Lorraine LaBarre eliminated all competition by lifting up singlehandedly the 300 pound bar bells. Last but not least came the 200 yard dash which resulted in a tie between Constance DiPilato and Diane Deslaurier.

Coming out of the Olympic gates, I spotted in the crowd America's ambassador to Mexico, David Harackiewicz, and his traveling companion Robert Hughes. I was just about to yell "Hello, Darling" when I was stopped by two of my old classmates, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Fontaine. Mrs. Fontaine was the former Joyce Dunn. I could see that Bobo hadn't changed, for he commented about how much younger I looked than his wife. I told them my secret, Patricia Army's two hour plan for instant beauty. I was sorry to leave them but Thelma-Lou was waiting.

I found Thelma-Lou in excellent condition and we blasted off across the Pacific. The clouds were so beautiful and as I passed cloud 9, to my surprise, I saw Kathleen Mahan. Well, I then crash landed with a tremendous impact on the Fiji Islands. There I saw to my amazement Sheila May doing the Waterbaloo, Linda Paille doing the Hitdig, and Doreen Caplette doing the latest American dance craze, the Mosquito Misfit. The chief native, Robert Buffone, came down to greet me with his queen, Mary Gonyea. The queen had a very lovely court comprised of Cheryl Boatman, Patricia Nowlan, Roberta Keyes, Linda Magill, and Charlotte Hill. I found the island interesting but I had to go on.

A choke, a gasp, and a wheeze from Thelma-Lou told me that we were in Sweden. Awaiting my arrival was my dearest, closest classmate, Jane Friberg, who was now the Queen of Sweden. We talked about old acquaintances and she informed me that Arlene Parella had become the Queen of Sheba, Candice Sharron had become the Princess of Transylvania, and Linda Holmes had become the Duchess of Nod.

As I was leaving, I asked Jane where the nearest helium station was. As Thelma-Lou was being rejuvenated, I noticed that I was across the street from the Swedish Academy where the Nobel Prizes were being awarded. I went in and watched the awarding of the Peace Prize to David Graveline, the prize in literature to Bruce Couture, the prize in chemistry to Craig Conroy, the prize in physics to Anthony Tricarico and the prize in medicine to Dr. John Scott. I felt very proud because each was so deserving of this recognition.

I then traveled to Vienna where I attended a concert. It was an excellent one because it had been conducted by Walter Pilet. He had a five man combo called the "Pilet Pounders." Strumming the guitar was Robert Lucas, beating the bongos was Wallace Stewart, shaking the baby rattles was Harry Collins, and playing the violin solo was Stanley Witkowski.

Because I needed some peaceful relaxation after that so-called concert, I decided to treat Thelma-Lou and myself to a ride in a gondola in Venice. Steering this gondola was Paul Anderson. It was a peaceful ride but adventure called me on.

Being a little hungry now I decided to go to Rome to eat some good home baked lasagne. I found a quaint little restaurant and to my surprise the owner was Joseph Martinelli. The head waiter, James Cullina, was very cordial, especially after he spilled spaghetti on my head. The strolling violinist, Joseph Langone, played soothing music and calmed my nerves. Thoroughly refreshed, Thelma-Lou and I were ready to continue our journey once more.

My next stop was Iceland and there I saw George Roe and James Braney. They were in the process of constructing a new modernized igloo development. The invention of waterproof snow by Alan Hickory and his assistant, Mark O'Gassian, greatly aided James and George. The use of freezeproof ice, whose inventors were Albert Felice and Gerald Fortin, had not yet been developed but they were using it anyway.

Walrus hunting has always been a fascinating sport and the top hunters were Clifford Taft and David Watts. Seal hunting is also a popular sport. Leo Soulor was named the most accomplished seal hunter because he had the most seal skins.

Also while I was in Iceland, I had a chance to talk to many Arctic women and I was amazed to find that many of these women were excellent fashion designers. I especially liked the spaghetti-strapped fur-lined evening gowns designed by Kathleen Bachant. The fur-lined nylon stockings designed by Diann Maciak were quite useful. Other leading Arctic designers were Audrey Mitchell, Janet Boisseau, Gale Remuck, Elaine Waskiewicz, and Elizabeth Markunas. Three of their inventions to help beautify women were the mink-lined imitation eyebrows, the waterproof snow flakes for imitation dandruff, and the walrus-greased lipstick to prevent chapping.

Although I enjoyed Iceland very much, my stay was limited because of no helium gas. I decided to visit France, because helium gas was their leading export. After Thelma-Lou had been refilled I decided to get a little suntan on the Riviera. My new Nancy Juneau knee-length bathing suit was just the thing to wear. The men were wearing ankle-length bathing suits, said to be designed by Daniel Jezyk and Harold Philbrook. The glass-plated sea shore was proven quite effective by those who were not content with just walking into the water. This glass-plated sea shore was due largely to the tireless efforts of William Gravel, David Jernstrom, and John Lange.

My next stop was England. Here I witnessed the ceremony in which many women received Florence Nightingale Awards. They were Katherine Zimage, Elaine James, Carol Piasta, Christine Clair, Jacqueline Rene, and Barbara Baucher.

Since Scotland was so close to England, I decided to spend a few hours there. On one occasion I was fortunate to hear a group of bagpipers who were called "The David Pierce Pipers." In this group were Richard Johnson, Gerald Kelley, Paul Israelson, and James Westerman.

Thelma-Lou then expressed a desire to see Spain and since she was completely refilled we went. Spain was just full of things to see and I decided to take in a bull fight. The head matadoress was Lynda Rixham and her assistant was Joyce Childs, whose assistant was Nancy Norton. Behind me I heard the voice of George Putrus yelling, "Peanuts, popcorn, candy." Desiring tea, however, I decided to go to China.

Arriving in China I met that little old tea maker, Harold Rivers, who informed me that he was going for tea with Robert Sulmonia and Stanley Dickie to discuss their new rice growing method. He invited me to join them but I was anxious to buy a Chinese kimono as I didn't want to look like a tourist. In a bargain basement I purchased one designed by Nancy Nettelbladt. I also bought a paper fan manufactured by Sheila Walker Incorporated.

Appropriately dressed for any occasion, I now felt like seeing a sabre fight. As I walked into the theater, I saw the figures of William Prendiville and Robert Vanderlinden practicing. The referee, Robert Lapinsky, was giving them last minute instructions. Since I was able to watch the practice, I didn't stay for the actual fight.

Desiring some fresh mountain air, I decided to climb the Matterhorn in Switzerland. I was helped up by three strong goat-herdsmen who were Raymond Anderson, Richard McSheehy, and Carl Ernitz. Halfway up we stopped to replenish our energy with some rich Swiss chocolate made by Terrence Anderson and Joseph Miller. From high above us at the top of the mountain I heard a yodeling sound which turned out to be the voice of Dennis Malloy. While descending the mountain I passed two old friends, Noreen Rogers and Theresa Russell. I asked them the time and they checked their watches, which cuckooed on the hour. To my surprise they were manufactured by Eugenia Spiridavicius and Phyllis Russell. It appeared to be quite late and I returned to find Thelma-Lou.

Being very tired from my traveling, I returned to the United States. As a change of pace I picked up a blanket and some Louise Young suntan oil and flew to Malibou for a peaceful day of basking in the sun.

When I arrived at Malibou, I found that I had come at a very bad time. It was the annual Surfers' Convention and I couldn't see the sand for the surf boards. I was surprised to see so many familiar faces. Kenneth Thompson was in marvelous form as he came tearing through the waves. I could see that David Tebo had fallen from his board and was being pursued by a shark. In no time the rescue squad made up of John Sulham, Robert Grenier, and Edward Santon came to his aid. In a flash Christine Samko was up to give him artificial respiration and in no time he was back for more fun on the surf board. One never learns, does one!

After this I decided to visit the John Laino Studios where I hoped to see many movie stars. Co-starring in the new movie "Pigeon-toed Penelope," were Bruce Lemoine and Jane Lachapelle. The members of the supporting cast that I knew were Patricia Kolofsky, Phyllis Girouard, and Nancy Wilczynski.

My next stop was Washington, D. C., where I decided to visit the president, Kenneth Holm, and his vice-president, Sharon Agurkis. The new Cabinet members included Paul Chausse as Secretary of State, Terry Burke as Attorney General, Warren Anderson as Secretary of the Treasury, Carolyn Ball as Secretary of Labor, Richard Bengtson as Secretary of Agriculture, James Matthews as Secretary of the Interior, Meredith Dana as Secretary of Defense, Andrew Donovan as Secretary of Commerce, Neal Donovan as Secretary of Interplanetary Relations, and Edwin Marco as Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare.

Since it was the cherry blossom season, Irene Savoie was just crowned the Cherry Blossom Queen. Her two runners-up were Shirley Ducharme and Sandra Cummings. As a result of this occasion, the three girls were flown to Texas. Since I was a close friend to the queen, I invited myself along.

Once in Texas we immediately spotted the rodeo candidates. There were many but I knew only a few. They were JoAnn Havalotti and Sandra Henault in her calf roping contest, Diane LeBlanc for bucking bronco riding, Roger Cofsky, Katherine Kipp, and Karen Korch in the trick riding contest. During intermission entertainment was provided by a group called "Hondas II" composed of Terrance Bush and Dale Anderson.

It was now time for me to return home to New York City. As I was flying home I had a chance to read my local newspaper and an announcement about the ten best dressed women in the world. They were Rita Raad, Annamae DeLuca, Stephanie Lettic, Mary Ann Roach Therinda Lindstrom, Helen Gwozdowski, Karen Sheehan, Catherine Mason, Elsa Arnett, and Elaine Whiterell.

After being home for two days, I took a stroll through my old neighborhood, Blackwitch Village. I was glad to see my neighbors once more. These were Joseph Jurgelonis and Alan Marble, the fruit peddlers; Samuel Longbook and Robert Rhodes, the street cleaners; and Susan Wishneski and Linda Lawson, the two sidewalk artists. I entered one of my favorite coffee houses just in time to hear Karen Krula recite her latest poem. After her recitation Dennis Kotasek played the guitar while Diana Watts sang. I was served steaming hot Expresso by their three waitresses, Suzanne Brodeur, Arlene Landry, and Sherry LaForte.

I was glad to be home but before retiring for the evening, I decided to go to a Broadway hit entitled, "Our Hearts Were Sad and Gloomy," starring Linda Stowe, David Lavich, and Vito Amorelli. They received a thundering applause and I was glad that my old friends had become so successful.

As I walked back to my apartment I thought of all my travels during the past day. I realized how fortunate I was to have seen all my former classmates of the graduating class of 1965 and I know that wherever we go or whatever we do, we will always remember our years at Millbury Memorial High School.

To the boys' basketball team we leave the younger brother of Lew Alcindor! He's "only" seven feet tall!

To the baseball team we leave bats that will hit, not miss, the ball, and gloves that will catch, not drop, the ball.

To the track team we leave someone to fill the footsteps Danny Jezyk left in compling one of the greatest four-year records the school has ever had.

To all the athletes we leave our best wishes for a very successful season next year.

To the future French pupils we leave a book entitled, French in Ten Easy Lessons or Five Hard Ones.

PROPHECY

The room in Hollywood, California, where I was awaiting the presentation of the Academy Awards was crowded with all the top stars of the motion picture industry. Suddenly a hush fell over the crowd as the master of ceremonies prepared to announce the Actress of the Year Award. Opening the envelope, he cleared his throat and said, "The winner is . . . Miss Janice Savoie for her stirring role in the motion picture Holiday in Quebec. Janice's role was a natural for her as the location of the film was Canada, where she visits every summer."

AMERICANS, YOUR COUNTRY NEEDS YOU

"These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, on this crisis, shrink from the service of their country; but he that stands . . . now deserves the love and thanks of man and woman." So wrote Thomas Paine in 1776. America, his adopted home, lay deep in winter. The ground was covered with snow and swept by icy winds. The American cause was declining by the hour, and many observers—some staunch patriots—thought the war would be over by spring, with Britain the winner. Washington's army, holed up in Valley Forge, was so poorly clad and fed that some soldiers could be of no service at all. Nevertheless, the war went on—on to an unexpected and resounding victory.

That victory is now history, and we would do well to remember that the first battles for democracy were not won by superior numbers, by crushing weight of armament, or by an educated, enlightened populace. Rather, victory was ours because each soldier, each patriot stood firm with a clear conscience and a willingness to pursue his principles unto death.

Today the battle lines are again drawn, but they are not limited to the defense of our eastern seaboard. We are now committed to the defense of the free world, and these too are the "times that try men's souls." If we think this battle can be won with pushbuttons, the purchase of allegiance through economic aid, or the delicate "brinkmanship" of diplomats, we have learned nothing from our own history. None of the goals of America is attainable without the intelligence, courage, and industry of individuals.

The United States of America has now assumed a position of leadership in world affairs. If we expect to win the battle against communism, the success of democracy at home is vital. If democracy fails here, there is no hope.

Democracy, itself, is the most rewarding and the most difficult form of government, and it rests not only upon knowledge and techniques of government, but also upon character. And who determines the character of our country? It is you, the individual. Because of our rapidly expanding population, we hear much talk of organization, teamwork, group enterprises, and mass education. It is time to remind ourselves that intellect and character are the exclusive possessions of individuals—that only through moral sensitiveness can there be an escape from the smugness that wealth and comfort breed. Moral sensitivity stimulates that concern for fellow men by which society escapes disintegration. Once the individual, as a moral, physical, and intellectual entity, is placed at the center of society, the acceptance of tyranny, the tolerance of totalitarianism, and the readiness to exploit the ignorant and the poor become impossible.

Upon the individual was this country founded; upon the individual was the responsibility placed to preserve and enlarge our liberties. With one-third of mankind ruled by a philosophy which regards the state as everything and the individual as a servant of the state, the individual American's concern has expanded from his nation to the world.

The Communists look upon our moral posture with a mixture of fear and scorn. The uncommitted nations of the world regard our vast economic power and enormous physical power with awe. Such feelings block any true communication, and they are not changed by "hot wars" or "cold wars." Only through Americans' individual concern will these barriers be broken down.

This is a long and perhaps endless quest upon which our nation has embarked. It is a battle which may never be won, but it will not even begin without you. America's great poet, Walt Whitman, foresaw this when he wrote,

"I swear I begin to see the meaning of these things!
It is not the earth, it is not America, who is so great,
It is I who am great, or to be great—it is you up there, or anyone;
The whole theory of the universe is directed to one single individual—namely to You."

YOUTH STANDS ACCUSED

Devastating attacks have been hurled against American youth with increasing frequency over the past decade. It is said that teen-agers lack basic moral, religious, and patriotic American values; that they drink too much, drive dangerously, and are delinquent; that they cheat commonly in school and college; and that they are conformists, afraid to be different. How many of these charges against them are true?

The shortcomings and failures of youth always achieve public notice. This fact has undoubtedly created a permanent distortion in the public view of American youth. Newspapers have inspired the public to believe that the current crop of teen-agers is a generation of delinquents. Many newspapers recently carried the story of a narcotics party in Westchester. 251 youngsters from prosperous families were found to have been involved. Reports said that a teen-age fad of smoking marijuana cigarettes and taking cocaine, heroin, and opium derivatives in pills, by inhalation, and by hypodermic injection was disclosed. Youth is accused of these charges, but where do liquor and narcotics come from—youths or adults?

Although accusations against teen-agers are often extremely exaggerated, some are undoubtedly true. Cheating is common in schools and colleges. This fact was made evident in a scandal that rocked the U. S. Air Force Academy. Some 120 cadets were implicated when investigation disclosed that some cadets had cheated on their midyear exams. What are the reasons behind these acts committed by youths?

American youngsters have been pushed hard to achieve more in school. Some have been confronted with severe pressure at home because the parents innocently and understandably want their children to get ahead. But constant prodding frustrates a child, and he may resort to cheating in order to bring satisfaction to his parents.

Why do teen-agers drink? Perhaps the main reason is to prove to one another that they have reached the age of independent action. The idea that youngsters are going to drink anyway and might as well do it at home under the supervision of parents is part of a modern permissive trend in child rearing. But it is irresponsible to permit teen-agers to drink under supervision without teaching them to respect the problems and consequences of liquor.

So where does the fault lie? We should calmly admit that many faults of youth are due to the mistakes of well-intentioned but unrealistic parents. The failure of fathers and mothers to understand their own developing sons and daughters may lead to unreasonable demands that destroy mutual confidence and incite the youth to rebellion. The absence of decision on the part of those in authority can encourage a lack of obedience in those who are commanded. Much of the disobedience and the consequent delinquency of youth is caused by the want of firmness and constancy in parents.

In order to exert discipline parents must first exercise love. This is the most natural and effective way to command respect and encourage self-respect. If a child feels that his parents are truly concerned with his welfare, he is given a strong reason for trying to live up to the moral code set up for him.

But teen-agers need more than parental guidance in defining acceptable behavior. First they need a sense of purpose which will permit them to enter into maturity. Second they need the awareness of other fine adult examples. Reform can come by way of example, and examples will be offered not by a miraculously purified society but by individuals worthy of admiration. Every adult should contribute by setting good examples. The task of adults is to help teen-agers become adults by raising their standards and values to maturity.

Our graduating class is about to go forward into a world full of challenges. We have received unlimited counsel in preparation for our diversified ways of life. With the help of God we will become strong adults, and we will exemplify admirable adult behavior for the next generation to follow.

THE DILEMMA OF SOUTH VIETNAM AND THE UNITED STATES' POSITION

The independence of South Vietnam has been the concern of the pro-Western nations for a period of several years. The undermining of the independence of South Vietnam has been the objective of North Vietnam and Communist China for that same period of years. During the period of the French interests in South Vietnam the Communists used subversion and guerrilla warfare. Recently the aggression has been less indirect and subtle, and it is becoming direct participation. If the Communists should succeed in South Vietnam, they will have a natural gateway to pro-Western Thailand and neutralist Cambodia. If this region falls into Communist hands, all of Southeast Asia will be open to Communist rule.

Americans and South Vietnamese are working together, hand in hand, in an attempt to save another country from Communism. The teamwork necessary for any operation to run smoothly is apparent here. In some cases the American is the expert, and he is expected to do the leading and give the commands; but many other times clearance has to come from a Vietnamese officer before any action can be taken. Most of the Americans have tremendous praise for the fighting spirit of the Vietnamese army. The Americans have said of the Vietnamese, "These guys are fighting a tough, dirty war as well as they can—and don't let anybody back home sell them short."

The spread of Communism into another country will affect the entire free world. It has become like a disease that is trying to infect the whole body; the more area it infects, the greater the danger is to the uninfected areas. Communism cannot be allowed to spread. Therefore the United States is trying everything it possibly can at this time to prevent its spread.

This is not the first time the United States has had to step in, and undoubtedly it will not be the last. We, the young people of today, must learn the importance of the United States' actions, for tomorrow we may be making these crucial decisions.

Who has to determine the legality and morality of the use of non-lethal gases? Who has to decide whether or not an attack should be made? These decisions are made by the military commanders of the United States and South Vietnam after careful consideration of the need and possible consequences. Will we, under the same circumstances at another time, react in the same manner? For the sake of democracy and the safety of the world, we can only pray that we are able to act just as wisely if the need should arise during our period of leadership.

At the present time President Johnson is determined to continue aid in South Vietnam. Last February, after the withdrawal of all United States dependents from South Vietnam, he said " . . . other reinforcements in units or individuals may follow. It has become clear that Hanoi has undertaken a more aggressive course of action against both South Vietnamese and American installations . . . We have no choice now but to clear the decks and make absolutely clear our continued determination to back South Vietnam in its fight to maintain its independence."

LIFE IN THE FUTURE

While touring the New York World's Fair, one admires the achievements of the past and marvels at the concepts of the future. Brilliant displays depict almost every aspect of science, from dinosaurs and cave men of an ancient world to today's lasers, rockets, and electron microscopes and tomorrow's projected world of television-telephones and trips to the moon. The most awesome exhibits are those depicting what life will be like in the future. Let us examine some of the aspects of life in the future which are only dreams now, but which may be realities in the future.

As we now see the development of space vehicles for a conquest of the moon, so in the future we will see the development of space vehicles for a conquest of the solar system. Not only will interplanetary travel be possible, but also a ferry service will exist between the earth and a space station orbiting some three hundred miles above the earth. It has been predicted that a ten-passenger rocket could be developed by the year 1980 to act as the ferry.

Here on earth we will see the rise of cities looking much more like the inside of a beehive than a city. By means of underground buildings and roadways these cities will take up less space but will contain more than our present cities. The whole concept may seem to be an architect's nightmare, but serious planning is already under way. The Columbia Plan for Worcester is an example of a step toward the city of the future.

Riding the honeycomb of roadways in these cities will be a vehicle completely unlike today's automobile in both appearance and operation. It will look somewhat like today's jet fighter plane, with wings and a turbine engine. The most remarkable characteristic of this vehicle, however, is that it will not ride on the roads, but will literally float above them. At a distance of from two feet from the ground to thirty miles above the earth, these vehicles will travel at speeds ranging from sixteen to sixteen thousand miles per hour. Now under development through the U.S. Department of Defense are vehicles that can float over both land and water. These hovercraft, as they are called, are now being designed specifically for military uses, but they also have distinct commercial possibilities. The likelihood of their use as future "cars" or ocean-going vehicles makes present experiments the forerunners of future invention. By the year 2000 the look and pace of transportation will be entirely different from what it is today. By that time interplanetary travel may be as common as intercontinental travel is today. And traffic congestion in outer space instead of on city streets may have become the number one transportation problem.

The aspects of life in the future that I have considered are not as far-fetched as they may seem. Through the past years science has made tremendous gains in every phase of life. The remarkable fact that many predictions of Jules Verne have come true witnesses the certainty that this is no science fiction material. We, as graduating seniors of Millbury Memorial High School, will not only become members of the society of the future but also shape its appearance. Those who are furthering their education at colleges will provide the technological skill, and those who are entering the working world will provide the necessary man-power. All of us will play some role in the shaping of the future.
